Town Cop Now on Job

Strathmore Town Council, at their regular meeting last Tuesday evening, deliberated for several hours the most serious question of appointing a town constable, fire chief, general utility man, etc., and the man on whose shoulders the burden was finally cast was Mr. A. W. Anderson. There was another candidate in the field, one Nelson, who at one time played for the Strathmore team in the earlier days of the town, but the Council finally decided that the burden would be too heavy a one for any man to concentrate on it and play ball simultaneously. It might even happen that a hen might get loose and destroy some citizen's garden, while the Constable was slugging out runs for the home team. Mr. Anderson has been farming in the district for some years past, and should be able to fill the position satisfactorily.

The Only Solution

In this column a few weeks ago, some attention was devoted to the subject of the Canadian Banking system and the relations existing between the banks on the one hand and the public on the other hand—the public being divided into two groups, those who placed money on deposit in the banks and those who borrowed money from the banks. At that time the principle was upheld that a bank's first duty was to its depositors, that is, to those from whom it had accepted money and for whom it undertook to act as a trustee of the funds thus entrusted to it.

It was further pointed out that the loaning power of a bank depended upon the volume of its deposits, and that, if a bank failed to adequately protect its depositors, it would very quickly lose them and hence have no money to loan. It may be that there are still some people laboring under the delusion that a bank carries on a loaning business out of its paid-up capital and accumulated reserves, but it only requires a very casual study of the Monthly Bankers' Review to reveal the fact that the total paid-up capital and reserves of all the chartered banks in Canada is equivalent to only a small fraction of the amount of money they have out on loans to the people. This means that the banks have loaned the money received by them by way of deposits, retaining in cash on hand only sufficient to meet any demands which depositors may make upon them from day to day.

Such a system—and it is the only sound and safe banking system—forces upon banks the necessity of being "hard times" and "financial stringencies" arise to curtail credits, because it is inevitable that it is during just such periods that (1) the making of deposits drops to a low mark, and (2) that those who have money on deposit have to draw some of it for use. There is only one thing for the banks to do in order to protect their depositors and be in a position to honor all cheques drawn upon them, and that is to curtail credits and reduce loans.

In a very notable address before the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' convention at Moose Jaw early in February, Hon. C. A. Dunning, Provincial Treasurer, not only very clearly outlined the above situation, but he demonstrated, apparently to the satisfaction of his big audience, why a Federal banking system is the only one in which the people of the West can look for satisfactory results. The West is a seasonal country. In the fall and early winter, when the grain crop is harvested and largely marketed, the bulk of the people have money. It is at that time the farmers pay their bills, interest on mortgages, and mortgage, and when the better established farmers place money on deposit in the banks. At that season few farmers, comparatively speaking, require credit, unless it be for the speculative purpose of holding their grain for a rise in the market price.

At other periods, however, farmers are not making deposits, but are either gradually withdrawing money they had on deposit or are asking credit.

In other words, at the one period of the year when a purely local or Provincial Bank would have money on deposit which could be used for loaning purposes, the demand for credit is at a minimum, while the period when loans are most urgently required is the time when deposits are not being made, but are required to the largest degree. It will be seen, therefore, that a purely local Western Bank would never be able to function as a great loaning institution at the very time when loans were imperatively required. Under the Federal system, on the other hand, a surplus of money on deposit in one section of the country can be used in another section where it may be required, money flowing back and forth, or in a circle, with the varying seasonal requirements of all sections.

Mr. Dunning, therefore, held out no hope for the establishment of purely Western agricultural banks. On the other hand, while frankly stating that the present Canadian Banking system was well designed to meet the needs of commerce—and it was for that purpose it was originally created—Mr. Dunning admitted it had its weakness from the Western agricultural standpoint. The remedy, however, was, in his opinion, to be found in the making of certain amendments to the Banking Act which would enable banks to accept certain securities now prohibited to them and thereby make possible the extension of larger and better credit terms to farmers.

Many of the more far-seeing Western bankers realized the necessity of such amendments, and would favor them. Mr. Dunning, therefore, advised the farmers to urge such amendments when the Banking Act came up for its decennial revision a year or two hence, rather than to persist in the impracticable demand for the establishment of local or Provincial Banks in the Western Provinces except for the specific purpose of meeting the credit needs of agriculture, which was impossible in a country where 75 per cent. of the people were engaged in a seasonal occupation. The present Federal Banking system, revised to meet the needs of agriculture, offers the only practical solution to this problem which is so vital to the development and prosperity of the West.

The reason is the constant reduction in the number of unidentified and the hope of the eventual identification of almost all of them through teeth charts which are being sent to Washington and compared with the records.

Gray Flannel for This Trim Frock

By Gertrude Beresford.

Flannel in all colors is a favored fabric in the realm of dress. In the model that is illustrated a very pretty shade of gray is chosen. It is fashioned on the simple lines that so accentuate the youthfulness of the figure.

Dark blue crepe brand in two different widths decorates this delightful dress, which boasts the very short sleeves that are remarked on many of the new creations for spring.

The lot of gray crepe de chine is a new version of the sailor. The crown is softly draped and the trim lightly rolled away from the face.

A band of crepe de chine is drawn around the crown and tied at the sides so that the ends swing to the shoulder.

Post-War Casualties.

Initiative steps for the establishment of a provincial rural credit system were taken recently by the Provincial Treasurer in suggesting that the Canadian Council of Agriculture convene an expert examination into the possibility of developing the Canadian banking system to meet the requirements of agriculture.

The present banking system, he claimed, while a most admirable one, was not created to meet the demands for agriculture, and the system of management leaves it to the hand office to grant loans, whose officials are not always in a position to judge the merits of the applicants.

PUBLIC MEETING OF IRRIGATIONISTS

The Wednesday evening of the Irrigation Convention took the form of a public meeting, at which a number of interesting addresses were delivered.

The main address of the evening was by Mr. A. S. Dawson, and is published in another column.

Mr. E. S. Stockton, Superintendent of Operations and Maintenance for the Western Section, in opening the meeting, expressed his pleasure in seeing so many of the public present. The idea of this annual gathering of the irrigation staff was to make the force more efficient. What they were here for was to be of service to the farmers throughout the district. There were between 600 and 700 water users in their territory. Mr. Stockton gave some further interesting statistics as to the extent of the work carried on here. The policy was based up in meeting in the centers of the farmers. They were endeavoring to interest the people to use the water so that they could benefit from it, especially for storage crops, etc. They had asked the people of the town and district to take part in the meeting, however they formed part of the community and the irrigation staff were anxious to cooperate with the whole community.

Mayor Butler took the opportunity of welcoming the irrigationists to Strathmore, and assured them that the town was wide open for them. President Mackenzie of the Community Club, also welcomed the visitors, and outlined the ideas with which the Community Club had been formed.

An agreeable interlude was furnished by Mr. G. H. Patrick, who gave "a very comic song in his usual good style, and with some topical allusions throughout the verses.

Mr. A. S. Dawson followed, and then Mr. Don Park delivered a short and optimistic address. He felt rather homesick when he came to Strathmore, having so many good friends here. His spoke of the problems that had to be faced in every farming district, and the dissatisfaction that was at present expressed with farming conditions. He had travelled a lot in the last few months and could assure them that this feeling was very general. As a matter of fact, we were better off here than anywhere else in the world. He had been down in States like Iowa, Indiana, and Montana, and found that prices there did not begin to meet cost of production, and that land was costing four or five times as much as it did here. It was cheaper in Indiana just now to burn corn than to haul it into town and haul coal back. The same kind of story came from D. C. He had seen lately sacks of produce lying around in the fields there because it did not pay to ship them out.

Mr. Park spoke strongly in favor of diversified farming, and said the man who did not have all his eggs in one basket was the man who was going to win out. He thought also that they in this irrigated district should go strong on alfalfa. He believed it would be the salvation of the country.

Mr. W. H. Risdon, President of Strathmore U.F.A., took up some local points which had been referred to by previous speakers. One reason why the farmer did not diversify more was that during the war years they had been urged by the government to concentrate on grain, and it took some time to get back to other conditions. Mr. Griffin, Superintendent of Irrigation for the Eastern Section, with headquarters at Brooks, said that they in the Eastern Section had been very much indebted to Mr. Stockton for valuable advice and information. The organization of the Eastern Section had been modelled largely after that of the Western Section, which Mr. Stockton had found successful. The purpose of the irrigation system was primarily service to the community. In the Eastern Section they were somewhat different from the Western Section, for their climate was much drier and the altitude lower. They needed irrigation practically every year.

Mrs. Douglas French made a dramatic appeal for support of the Memorial Hall project, pointing out the debt that was owed to the boys who gave their lives, and the desirability of an adequate memorial.

The proceedings closed with the singing of "God Save the King."

Whisper, March 15.—The Canadian Pacific Railway has decided that no new project involving expenditure on capital account will be undertaken in the west until business conditions are more settled, said D. C. Coleman, vice-president in charge of western lines, today. Mr. Coleman has been in the east conferring with head office officials.

"There is no occasion for gloom or despondency about the future of western Canada, but Canada at the moment certainly demand that business enterprises shall be conducted with prudence and caution," Mr. Coleman stated.

"If the situation clears up a bit later in the year we have in mind a reasonable programme of improvements and extensions but for the time being any action in connection with that programme is deferred." Asked as to what the action of the Canadian Pacific Railway would be regarding wages, Mr. Coleman said: "The Canadian railways have not taken any steps up to the present in connection with a general wage adjustment. Of course, any general movement in connection with the wages of railroad labor on this continent has tended hitherto to be international in its application."

HARD TIMES DANCE

Under the auspices of the Ladies Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A. a very successful and enjoyable Hard Times Dance was held in the Opera House on Thursday evening. Music was provided by Mrs. Trimmer's Orchestra, and was an unusual first-class. A big crowd was present, and the sexes being very evenly distributed, everyone had lots of dancing opportunities.

Prizes for the most appropriate costume were won by Miss Sarah Miller and Mr. Roy Miller.

The ladies of the G.W.V.A. who were on the dance committee, were greatly assisted in Irish costumes. The refreshment arrangements were O.K.

Mr. Layzell being present, was invited to auction off a number of champagne flutes which had been used as table decorations, and in this way, and with the help of his valuable assistant, Bobby Thompson, he added $5 to the Memorial Fund in a few minutes. The net proceeds of the dance will be over $100, which will go towards providing furnishings for the Memorial Hall.

Rebellion Days, 1884-85

A couple of lines brought us to Goodfellow's, and here we received the heartiest of welcomes and heard the rather astounding news that the postmaster at Ft. La Corne had slipped down the river, taking his skinners' furs, but leaving all goods and ammunition behind just as no one to look after them. Goodfellow, though he had retired some years back, was we felt to save what he could of the company's property, but he had been also as all the surrounding residents had fled likewise. Now, with two of us, we decided to visit the fort next morning and stay the day. We received some very good news also as to a safe escape for a regular and fleet the time for that was not yet as he had a York boat hidden in a creek, and our own stocks would amply provision us. In addition, we had the four or five fish traps and plenty of looks and ammunition. His cattle, of which he had a large herd, greeted him as to their final disposal, and we finally decided on the quiet that one of us would have to stay with them with his rifle, and drive them to a safe retreat in the hills to the east. He was in great spirits over my arrival, and said that we were now good for a regular and reliable. We made a famous night of it, he telling stories of wintering on the plains among the buffalo herds they had often to defend the company's property against hostile Indians. And the ladies who saw another very excellent close and happily enjoyed themselves. Mrs. Goodfellow, who was a member of the well-known Turner family, was the soul of hospitality, and the men were as open and made much of by their line youngsters.

Breakfasting on these close and driving to our arms, we drove down to old Ft. La Corne, at that time situated about two miles down the river from the present post and within easy reach of the water, all imported supplies coming there by boat at that time. We found that the Indians were much interested in the valuable goods lying about, but Mr. Goodfellow had been master of La Corne for a number of years and immediately ordered them all across the Saskatchewan River. Away they went at once, doing up general goods, and Christians for many years back, this being the site of one of the oldest churches of England Mission in Saskatchewan.

As we were liable to be visited by hostiles at any time, to whom the supplies would be very acceptable, our first thought was of the ammunition, there being a considerable stock of powder, bullets, shot, gunnags and traps for the time being. We had a few. We finally disposed of these in an old dry well, packing them carefully against dampness and removing all traces on the ground. We then carried all valuable things that were lying about into the store, put the general goods, guns, traps, and packed the place up as best we could for the night. It took several days of steady work to fix an exact inventory of all goods on hand, and the last day, while we were taking up totals (which we filled into the thousands) the door of the store opened and in walked four French half-breeds. I thought we were in for trouble and backed up against the shelves where my six-shooter was lying loaded, but when Goodfellow, who was a word to Goodfellow, told me that his hand was curling, and finally he slipped in sharp turns, "What do you want?" With that, the leader evidently, produced a letter to him from Chief Factor Clarke at Prince Albert, asking him to take an inventory of all goods he could find and ship the same down to Cumberland House, further stating that three men were loyal French half-breeds and anxious to get away from the fighting. The tension was then relaxed. I asked George afterwards what he would have done if they had proved hostile. "I would have called to them to pitch their hands up," was his confident answer. "I was over forty years in the company's service and never had anything taken from me except a loaded gun. I would have shot your head off." The letter also instructed that a careful copy of the inventory was to be sent up to Mr. Clarke at Prince Albert. For many years he could have been called the unbroken King of Northern Saskatchewan, with everyone obedient to his dictates. Now he had seen some of his good friends shot down at Duck Lake, beyond that it was only a question of his life. One of the few Irishmen in the company's service, a finer fellow never stepped, and I owe him much gratitude for many acts of kindness.

As we once commenced packing and loading a good start, then arranged a camp for the men and went back home, intending to freight my furs down in the morning. This we did, and the big dogs and half-breeds, as the boat off with its valuable cargo. This meant safety, as the rebels never attempted reaching the lower Saskatchewan. Remains to the mouth of this river at Grand Rapids was the steamer Colville on Lake Winnipeg, which took all cargoes on to Fort Garry.

After fair copies had been made of the inventory and shipping lists, I returned to the store at Prince Albert, so that next morning in the saddle, by way of the Forks. This is a wild and beautiful spot where the walls of the north and south branches unite, having very high banks clothed with dark spruce, and smiling, clinging waterfalls. We could see a house on the far bank and find several shots to attract attention but without success. As after careful search up and down the bank in search of a boat or canoe and finding none, I rather recklessly determined to swim in. Riding the bank, the south branch for half a mile, taking a small dry log along for a rest and placing various loads and papers on my horse, I crossed the water to meet. Wow, but it was cold, and I took the little mare and myself all we knew to make it. I was very much exhausted on reaching there. In fact but for the log I doubt me having come on. On going on to the shore, I found it deserted, the cellar trap open and a young beaver lying dead at the foot of the stairs. After a house search found plenty of fresh eggs, but a summer fire had a good supper and quite my clothes. The party was quite comfortable in the stable, with lots of hay, and there I also slept.

A Prominent Westerner

Efforts to Apply State Socialism Falls in North Dakota.

The short cut to universal prosperity taken by the State of North Dakota four years ago turns out to be a blind alley. The effort to apply State socialism has failed. North Dakota is compelled by sheer financial chaos to get back into the beaten track. Disguise it how they may, the Non-Partisan Leagues have been obliged to abandon their half-completed projects and to resort to the older, well-tried methods of conducting business.

The agitators who prey upon the credulity of agricultural communities will doubtless endeavor to repress the failure of North Dakota's experiment as due to the spiritual opposition of the State's farmers and capitalists. The truth is that North Dakota has been unable to obtain the capital required to carry out its schemes because of its own mismanagement.

The Wide Scope of Work Carried on By the Seed Branch

Railway Extension in Northern Alberta

Negotiations For Conference Between Governments of Alberta and British Columbia.

A dispatch from the north country has had before the Alberta Government an appeal that another $500,000 be sent to make effective the $1,000,000 already invested in the railway bridge across the Peace River and the grade beyond. An extension of the Great Canadian Railway from Peace River to Yarmouca following the bridge west from the end of the grade, is what is sought, and facts and figures were given to show that unless such an extension was made for at least 15 or 20 miles, there would be an increase of discouraged and financially broken settlers within the next year or two.

Railway extension in the north country is now definitely before the government. Negotiations are pending for a conference between the governments of Alberta and British Columbia, with regard to extending the railway from Spirit River into the Peace River country. The government of British Columbia is taking the initiative in this case.

Alberta Wheat Shipped to United States

Wheat Value at $28.49/38.50 Shipped During the Month of January.

Nearly 200,000 bushels of wheat valued at $28,49/38.50, were shipped to the United States from the province of Alberta during the month of January, according to S. C. Root, United States consul at Edmonton. As compared with the corresponding month last year this is a very large increase. Increases are also shown in the export of flour and shorts, while a decrease in the number of cattle shipped is recorded, due to a large extent to the unusually mild winter experienced throughout the province. Flour exports in 1921 amounted to 12,645 sacks, valued at $28,49/38.50, 77,000 sacks, valued at $28,49/38.50, 2700 sacks, valued at $28,49/38.50, and wheat, 179,655 bushels valued at $28,49/38.50.

Mass Teaching is Over

Individual Attention Should Be Given to Apparently Backward Pupils.

The fact that children should be studied individually, and not in the mass, is a comparatively recent discovery. We are not far removed from the days when children were brought into schools to read or write. The children of the future, however, are to be taught in the mass, and the class and were regarded as clever; others remained at the bottom and were assigned to remain by a system of individual teaching. They were the "dopes." It was one of the many things that the educational authorities that should not be overlooked. That so many of the clever ones never made their mark in after-school life, and so many of the great men had been regarded as dopes in their school days—London Daily Chronicle.

Fitting Skis on Aeroplanes

Better Landings Can Be Made With Skis in Snow Than With Wheels.

In preparation for some winter flying in the north country, the Imperial Oil Company's non-slipping skis, which are being fitted to all skis, and numbers are being substituted for wheels. A series of experimental flights will be made shortly. It has been found that better landings can be made with skis in snow than with wheels, and, especially in the case of the heavier aircraft, skis are more effective, and most fully practicable for winter work.

Alberta Farmers Protest Reduced Grants

F. J. Day, of Red Deer, was re-elected president of the Alberta Farmers Association for the fourth consecutive year.

R. Carter, of Orem, is vice-president.

A resolution was passed protesting the proposals to cut down federal grants from the government. The next convention will be held in Edmonton.

Not Enough to Go Round.

"Jack, how is it that you never bring any good news home from school?" "Oh, papa, there are such a lot of us that when my turn comes, there are none left!"—Edinburgh.

The seed branch works along the lines of the encouragement of the seed to be better, and the production of good seed. During the war years it also had charge of the work of insuring a proper supply of good seed for districts in Canada where there was an apparent shortage. This branch also administers the Seed Control Act, and at the last session of parliament, the administration of the Commercial Feeding Stuffs Act was also placed under the charge of this branch.

There are four divisions in the seed branch, namely: Seed Testing Division, Seed Inspection Division, Seed Marketing Division, Seed Purchasing Commission.

The Seed Testing Division maintains and operates Government Seed Laboratories at Orono, Winnipeg and Calgary, where purity analyses and germination tests of seed samples for farmers, seed merchants and institutions are carried on. Official samples taken by customs officers under the Seed Control Act, and for special investigations are also tested at these laboratories. A great deal of investigational and research work was connected with this division during the last few years, and some valuable work connected with the inter-annual tests of feeding various seed crops brought to a favorable conclusion.

The Seed Inspection Division enforces the Seed Control Act. The inspectors connected with this division inspect seed grain and three flax seed received into, and shipped from government elevators or other warehouses by the Seed Purchasing Commission, or other dealers. Certain importation regulations are applied, and general quality standards for seed lots have also been fixed. Samples submitted to the seed laboratories for test are graded and reported on by this division.

The Seed Marketing Division makes and issues semi-monthly seed reports, connected with this division, and also issues reliable seed importers in other parts of the empire and foreign countries. It also supervises the administration of the advances paid by the Seed Branch to the various provinces in connection with seed and field crop purchases. During the war years this division, in collaboration with the Division of Foreign Plants of the Experimental Agriculture Department, has been producing a large quantity of field seed of which at that time it was anticipated there would be a serious shortage. The division has also been active in the extension of markets for seed.

The Seed Purchasing Commission has now been in operation for some four years. It was originally established to enable the government to supply a supply of good seed for farmers in certain areas which had been devastated by drought or other causes, and has been in operation since that time. This commission purchases, stores, chaffs and distributes at cost, seed of good quality to those districts where there is a need. It has already done a business of over three million dollars per year.

The outside work of the Seed Branch is carried on by a field staff of inspectors. For the purpose of administration the Dominion is divided into six districts, each of which has a district seed inspector in charge. The officers in these districts are equipped with seed inspection, inspecting field crops, obtaining market information, judging seed and addressing the public.

INCOME TAX HINTS

Some clever wags has issued a satire on the government schedule for figuring personal income tax. It is worth preserving:

If your income is $2,400 a year and you have a diamond ring and an automobile and are married to a beautiful girl, 26 years old, you take the amount of your income, add your personal property, subtract your street number, multiply by your height, add your wife's weight, and divide by your telephone number.

You will then carry your name registered from your place, to schedule it on the tenth line of which you will subtract the multiple which you put on line X Schedule K, entering in column A.

If you have a child in the family, subtract $200 from your income, add the amount of your personal property, multiply by your waist measure, subtract the size of your collar, add your child's age, multiply by the amount you have given rebekah nine the 1 you have given the church during the year and divide by the number of your automobile license tag.

If there are two children, you deduct $400 from your income, add the weight and age of the second child, divide by the date of your birth, multiply by the size of your hat, and subtract the weight of your mother-in-law. The result of the above computation should be carried to line VII, Schedule I, after deducting from that the total of G. P. and A. adding P. C. and E, carrying it to column D, which will cover all taxation except the income and Surtax.

After you get it all figured out you won't have to pay income tax, but your nature, for they will have you over at the Country hospital and strap down. —Wintered Strathmo Night!
